Mealkits solving an everyday problem

Must: EAT!

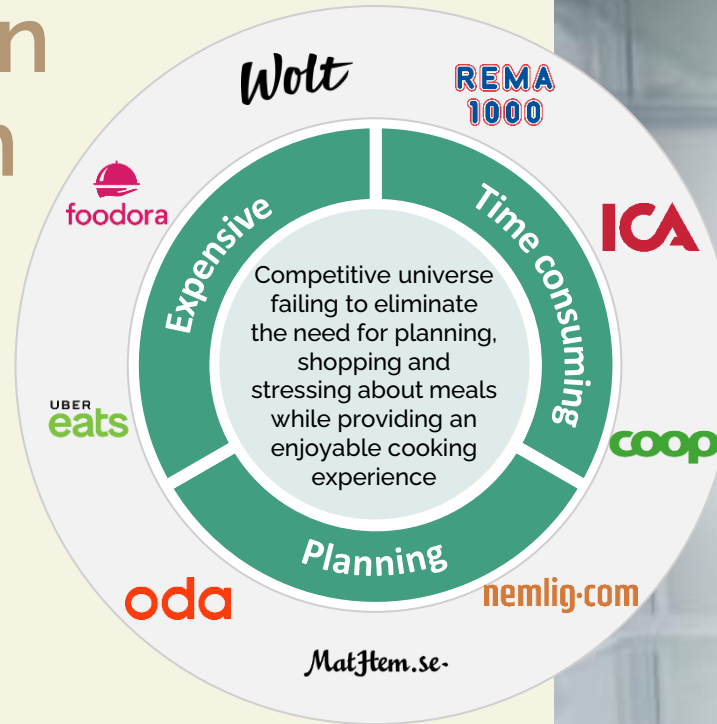

Want to:

- cook your own meals and eat at home together
- enjoy a variety of inspiring and nutritious food
- spend wisely, don't over-consume

However:

- limited time and inspiration to plan and shop for groceries
- limited knowledge about nutrition and cooking

Mealkits:

- Convenient and time-saving
- Personalization, variety and flexibility
- Good cooking experience
- Nutritionally well-balanced
- Minimal food-waste

The meal kit business model

- Weekly subscription service delivering recipes and ingredients to the customer's home
- Customers choose from a curated selection of balanced, nutritionally calculated recipes
- Eliminates the need to plan and shop for ingredients, saving time, and providing inspiration
- Demand-driven model with high order visibility, minimal inventory, and low food waste

Opportunity to benefit from mega trends

Increasing shift from offline to online – online penetration still limited in the Scandinavian food market, leaving headroom for growth

Increasing awareness of food-health relationship – Vegetarianism, Humanitarianism & Environmentalism are on the rise

The new convenience – longer working hours and an active lifestyle contribute to consumers feeling time pressure and missing out on quality moments with family

Call for sustainability – 73%¹ of consumers around the globe would "definitely or probably change a behavior to reduce their impact on the planet"

Customer retention means “long-tail” customer relationships

Each line represents the percentage of customers receiving at least one delivery in month n in comparison to all customers that received a delivery in the first month (Month 0). Each yearly cohort is based on a simple average of the 12 grouped months for each year. For newer cohorts (2022-2023) the averages for the last 12 months of the line will have successively fewer data points reaching only one data point at the end of the line.

Vertical boxes and lines in the diagram represents the distribution of data points for all monthly cohorts from Jan 2019 after n number of Months since first delivery. 50% of data points are represented in the vertical rectangle while 25% of are represented in the upper and lower lines, respectively.

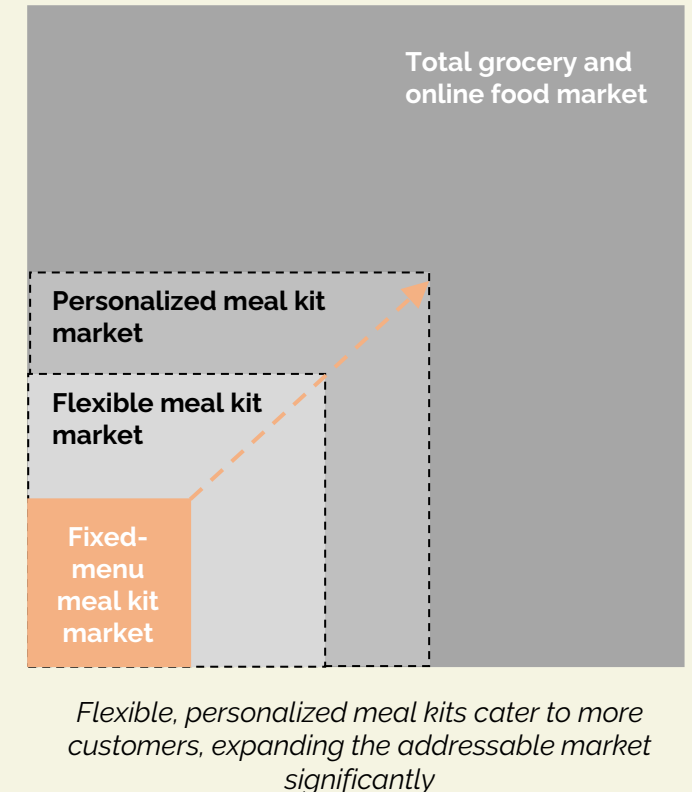

Group revenue retention (all brands)

- High value customers have long-tail relationships and purchase more frequently
- This behavior drives a higher revenue retention curve vs customer retention
- While 2019 and 2020 have a positive bias, 2021 has a negative bias due to high post pandemic churn
- Long term customer relationships play an important role in current revenue generation and profitability

Each line represents an unweighted average of the Net sales by cohorts for a given year compared to their initial starting quarter (quarter 0). Customers are grouped by the quarter of their first delivery and revenue is measure in each subsequent quarter relative to the first. These percentages are then averaged for each year based on the number of quarters after first delivery for each group and plotted in the graph.

Key factor for customer retention: the food

We started with fixed meal kits to now have a fully flexible and customer unique subscription that always delivers according to the customers' preferences

In our business model there is no limitation to number of recipes/week: we offer 285 recipes weekly in our 4 brands – this is the largest selection of recipes in the meal kit category

In a menu cycle we use between 250-300 ingredients, maintaining efficient procurement and ingredient handling

Forecasting is based on data and tracking customer behaviour.

Offering customers choice and variation and that our recommendations are based on customer preference is essential to customer satisfaction, retention and healthy order value

The kitchen experience

- We aim to deliver epic customer experiences.
- The kitchen experience includes the “non-taste” elements as well:
 - how we pack the box
 - the ingredients
 - how easy it is to prepare the food
 - how long time it takes
 - the number of steps to make the dish
 - the cleaning up afterwards
- And the most important factor: the meal itself!

Ingredients & procurement: we work differently

- Our way of working is different from e-commerce and retail:
- We order on demand after customers have locked their orders
- Almost zero inventory and extremely low food waste
- Food waste is also reduced at the producer, who produce what we need and nothing else
- We work with suppliers who can develop tailor-made ingredients for our meal kits which are:
 - ideal for packing
 - contain exact portion sizes
 - best prices
 - minimum waste
 - unique taste
 - not available in stores: unique experience
- Customized packaging solutions: saving on plastic and optimising deliveries to production

The secret sauce – a purpose-built platform

- Technology – a core differentiator crucial to our success
- The platform powers our 4 brands, including systems for menu planning, purchasing, inventory, production and logistics, customer handling, subscription engine
- Another core part of our technology stack is the data and analytics platform, where we gather all transactional, customer, and product data
- As the mealkit subscription business isn't like other ecommerce businesses, we have developed our own solutions, including e-commerce front end
- The sophistication, and historical investment makes technology a barrier to entry for new entrants

In-house development makes us agile

- Nobody knows mealkits like we do
- We build what is core for us, what is unique and what is not readily available on the market, such as core meal kit functionality (menu planning, etc.)
- Other tools, which are available as SaaS tools, we buy off-the-shelves and integrate, like a CRM system
- What we lack in scale, we make up for in speed and agility
- We are focused on Nordic customers, developing one solution deploying it on all markets
- Our approach gives a flexibility, freedom to innovate and control of our data

Data & analytics – our largest focus area for technology investments

Throughout the last several years, we have been:

- ✔ Building a team of data analysts, data scientists, ML & Data Engineers
- ✔ Building a data platform with all operational and customer data
- ✔ Establish common practices for building data and ML products
- ✔ Creating a data-driven culture throughout the entire organization

Data & analytics fuel our core business

Selected ML&AI use cases:

Demand forecasting

Personalization & relevance

Picking line optimization

Churn prediction and prevention
